

Best Chicken Fried Steak In Los Angeles

June 29, 2016 5:00 AM

(credit: 10 face/shutterstock)

With its origins traced back to the southern plains of Texas, the first chicken fried steak is believed to have been introduced by German immigrants. The recipe has changed very little since its first appearance on the dinner table, and it has become a staple of southern cooking to this day. Also known as country fried steak, this culinary creation is comprised of a tenderized cut of steak that's battered, pan fried and topped with a creamy gravy. This dish is quite versatile and can be served for breakfast, lunch and dinner. It can also be served as a sandwich. Fortunately, if you live in Los Angeles, you don't need a road trip to get this authentic meal in front of you. All you need to do is head to one of these five places!

Watch & Listen LIVE

LATEST GALLERIES

 Backstreet Boys Crash Indoor Cycling Class

Peaches' Smokehouse & Southern Kitchen Food Truck

Mid-Wilshire
Los Angeles, CA 90036
(323) 801-6368
www.peachestruck.com

(credit: Peaches' Smokehouse & Southern Kitchen)

If you live in the Mid-Wilshire area and haven't tried a country fried steak sandwich from Peaches' Smokehouse & Southern Kitchen's food truck, you're seriously missing out. Peaches' is practically as famous as the clients the truck caters to (The Revenant's post-Golden Globes party, Jim Beam Tasting with Mila Kunis). So, if you want a great chicken fried steak, find Peaches'. Served with house peach aioli, greens and onions, this dish is perfectly tender and delightfully crispy. Make sure you get a side of fried pickles to go with it. You won't be sorry.

Related: Best Places For French Fries In Los Angeles

Kristine G. Bottone is a freelance writer living in Los Angeles. Her work can be found at Examiner.com

